

Development Application Checklist

Baseline documentation for development applications requiring planning consent

When development applications are lodged under the Planning, Development and Infrastructure Act 2016, baseline documentation may need to be provided with the application. Baseline documentation is required for any application that requires a planning consent. The documentation required depends on the type of development that is proposed and is outlined in Schedule 8 (Plans) of the Planning, Development and Infrastructure Regulations 2017.

If an application is lodged without its required baseline documentation, the relevant authority may request additional information before proceeding further. Alternatively, a relevant authority may choose to waive the documentation requirement if it is deemed appropriate to do so.

Relevant authority - the decision-maker who assesses the development application. This could be an Assessment Manager from council, an independent accredited professional, State Planning Commission or relevant panel.*
